Dreamworks brings together paintings created in Berlin between 2017 and 2019. The series developed during a period marked by personal loss and by the attempt to understand what remains after someone deeply loved is no longer physically present. Rather than illustrating grief directly, the paintings move through longing, memory, intimacy, absence and gradual transformation.

Working on canvases larger than her own body, Zoé Mad becomes physically immersed in the image, moving through melancholy and dreams. Rather than describing a scene, Mad searches for its emotional temperature. Emotion takes over, reality dissolves.
